FILMCLUB

The Filmclub is a landmark for South Tyrolean cinephiles. It was founded as a cultural association in the late 1970s, during a time of great cultural excitement, movements, ideas, and aspirations, in which auteur cinema played an important role.

The Filmclub retains from its origins the aspiration to be a place open to dialogue and debate, both inside and outside its three screening rooms.

In addition to Bolzano the association is also present in Merano, at the former Cinema Ariston, and in other locations (Bressanone, Egna, Silandro, Brunico, and Vipiteno).

Cameraperson

A documentary by Kirsten Johnson

Kirsten Johnson, cinematographer for prominent directors such as Laura Poitras, Michael Moore, and many others, made this film as a director. Cameraperson draws from the remarkable footage shot on the sets of other documentaries and reworks it, highlighting moments that have personally affected her.

What emerges is an elegant meditation on the relationship between truth and the camera frame. She transforms scenes that have been presented on major festival screens as one kind of truth into an alternative one — a story about personal journey, craft, and direct human connection.
